

Michelle DeAngelis has over 20 years of experience delivering key results and creating peak performers from Start-ups to Fortune 500 companies by running large-scale consulting engagements, leading complex projects, and conducting rigorous corporate coaching.

She has now coached over 600 leaders and brings invaluable savvy and understanding of the tough realities of business. Michelle is particularly unique in combining her business acumen to drive results with enhancing interpersonal relationships.

Known for being both macro and micro, Michelle has exceptional strategic insights as well as the ability to zoom in on execution to deliver results. A representative coaching engagement was for one of the top ten US banks: Michelle conducted executive and senior management coaching over 3 levels in a major division of the organization, among C-level, direct reports and 2-downs, which resulted in achieving several critical business metrics and the client acknowledging that this “raised the collective GPA” of the division.

The focus consisted of three phases built around awareness of and managing oneself, managing one’s team and managing one’s internal network to cultivate partnerships, all within the realities of demanding business requirements.

Michelle stays sharp by providing seasoned interim leadership and leading complex projects for companies ranging from Finance to Technology, large and small.

Prior to starting her business 20 years ago, Michelle was a Vice President at Bank of America managing a team of 300+ people and multi-million dollar budgets. Michelle holds a Bachelor’s Degree from Arizona State University, is a published author, dedicated community servant and avid athlete.
